6th Sunday in Ordinary Time (Year A, Cycle 2)

15th February 2026

Reflection from Fr Elijah: Interior righteousness — obedience to God that flows from a transformed heart

On this 6th Sunday, the Church presents to us a demanding and luminous Gospel, taken from the Sermon on the Mount. Our Lord does not abolish the Law; He fulfills it. He leads us beyond minimal compliance into the depths of the heart.

In the first reading from the Book of Sirach, God sets before us choices: fire and water, life and death. We are not puppets of fate. The Lord respects our freedom. Holiness is not accidental; it is chosen. Sin is not inevitable; it is consented to. This sober anthropology grounds Christian moral life in responsibility and grace.

In the Gospel, Jesus intensifies the commandments: “You have heard... but I say to you.” Anger becomes the seed of murder. Lust becomes the root of adultery. Oaths become unnecessary where truth reigns. The Lord is not satisfied with external rectitude; He seeks purity of intention. The moral life is not merely behavioural modification but interior transformation.

Taken together, the readings emphasize three interrelated theological points: Freedom – God grants authentic moral agency. Responsibility – Choices have spiritual consequences. Interior conversion – True holiness requires transformation of the heart.

This teaching confronts a common temptation: to reduce discipleship to rule-keeping. Christ calls us instead to righteousness that exceeds that of the scribes and Pharisees – a righteousness born of communion with Him. The New Law is the grace of the Holy Spirit poured into our hearts. Without grace, the Gospel seems impossible; with grace, it becomes the path to beatitude.

Today, let us examine not only our actions but our intentions. Where does resentment linger? Where do we cultivate compromise? The Lord who commands also empowers. If we choose life – if we choose Christ – He will accomplish in us what He asks of us.
